Over the years, the Chanakya's Philosophy written in 3rd century BC is gaining importance across various sectors of development. Both governance and development economists and philosophers, besides others, have been wanted to debate on the relevance of it for 21st century for the benefit of the larger society. The published books and papers on Chanakya's philosophy and Arthashastra varies with wide perspectives portrayed by various authors. To enable fruitful discussions and to build better and credible knowledge base on these relevant aspects, the Chanakya University is organizing an international conference, tentatively titled as "Chanakya's Philosophy and its Relevance to 21st Century: Theories and Practices".

Broad Themes & Sessions

- a) Good governance, effective leadership and stakeholder groups: Approach to governance, leadership and stakeholder engagement are prerequisites of success for the effective delivery of services. They are also key pillars of good society. How they were conceptualised in Chanakya's philosophy? Their relevance for current times must be analysed.
- b) Society, community organization and decentralization: Historical perspective, from 3rd BC as described by the Chanakya, on local governance and decentralisation, role of civil society organizations needs better understanding. Types of decentralization include political, administrative, fiscal. For the future years, need more research on how they may help across all areas of government and society, based on historical roots.
- c) Welfare economics: Chanakya's arthashastra mainly focuses on the allocation of resources and goods, which affects social welfare. Also deals with how these factors affect the overall well-being of people in the economy. Arthashastra provides techniques to evaluate well-being at the aggregate level. Attempting to apply the principles of welfare economics gives rise to the field of public economics, the study of how government might intervene to improve social welfare. How these principles may be refined and adopted for the future is critical.

- d) Sustainable development and management of natural resources: Historically and also now, in several regions, community-driven development has led to promote resource transfer and civil society empowerment strategies. In turn, sustainable development and management of natural resources. In view of SDGs and historical perspectives, we need better strategies for future years.
- e) Rule of law, legal institutions and society: Arthashastra engages extensively with questions of law and social order, dispute resolution, role of customs, relationship between law and social groupings. There is a need for reflection on the ideas espoused in this treatise through the lens of contemporary scholarship on legal theory, law and society, legal pluralism, and constitutionalism. This would open space for debate on the impact of Kautilyan conception of law in shaping society over the years and its relevance in rejuvenating modern day legal institutions.
