"The student so trained should learn to distinguish between what may fairly be called a matter of fact and what is certainly a mere matter of opinion. He should be accustomed to distinguish issues and to look at separate questions each on its own merits and without an eye to their bearings on some cherished theory. He should learn to state fairly, and even sympathetically the position of those to whose practical conclusions he is most stoutly opposed. He should become able to examine the suggested idea and see what comes of it, before accepting it or rejecting it. Without necessarily becoming an original student he should gain an insight into the conditions under which original research is carried on. He should be able to weigh evidence, to follow and criticize arguments and put his own value on authorities."
